

NAZGÛL ON FELLBEAST

Remember the excitement when you first saw the trailer for The Return of the King? How cool the Fellbeast looked when the Witch King confronted Gandalf? Well Sabertooth is bringing that feeling to your tabletop in August of 2005.

A dark shadow falls over the hex map. The sound of leathery wings beating comes through the air, filling your forces with dread and awe. The Fellbeasts are arriving! Anxious eyes scan the sky, wondering who is mounted on the dreaded creature. Is it a Nazgul, or worse, the Witch King himself?

These will be highly sought after and playable pieces, armed with an array of special abilities. 5 out of 6 packages will feature the Nazgul mounted on the Fellbeast, but 1 out of 6 will come with the Witch King himself riding the Fellbeast into battle. Either variation will also come with a Premium Line figure of Eowyn to balance the sides.

This August, add these exciting figures to your collection. Rivaling the Balrog in size, the Fellbeast is a gorgeous sculpt from its fearsome maw to the end of its sinuous tail, and from wingtip to wingtip. Dynamically posed, this figure will attract a lot of attention whether on the map or showcased on a shelf. Like other large figures produced for The Lord of the Rings TMG, the rendition is excellent, worthy of display space.

The level of detail on this figure is incredible. The Fellbeast stands tall, poised to strike at the accompanying Eowyn figure. Armor-clad, Eowyn is another piece that shows how much attention and work is put into these miniatures. She steps off the screen for this epic battle.

Recreate the Witch King's defeat at Eowyn's hand or forge a new destiny and lead the forces of darkness to victory... no matter which side you choose, people will be drawn to watch. At 7 inches tall, the Fell Beast is an attention-getter, towering over nearly anything on the map. When you put it on the table, onlookers will ooh and ah, while your opponent will immediately worry.

As the Premium Line grows, the high standards are maintained resulting in figures that are truly deserving of the description "Premium." These are cool-looking, must-have items for both the gamer and the Tolkien enthusiast.
